

HealthSapiens Announces Appointment of Polymath CEO Trevor Koverko to its Board

Addition of Renowned Blockchain and Cryptocurrency Investor and Notable Figure in the Space to Leadership Team Will Help Advance Blockchain Adoption in Healthcare

NEW YORK, Oct. 2, 2018 – HealthSapiens, a blockchain-enabled, decentralized and borderless healthcare platform, today announced that Trevor Koverko has been named to the HealthSapiens Board. The appointment will increase the size of HealthSapiens Board to 12 members.

“We’re thrilled to have someone of Trevor’s caliber join the HealthSapiens Board of Advisors,” said Karim Babay, HealthSapiens Founder and CEO. “With this outstanding addition, we look forward to working together to advance blockchain adoption within the healthcare industry.”

Background on Trevor Koverko

Trevor Koverko founded Polymath in 2017 to disrupt the securities industry by creating an open platform that gives businesses access to the blockchain, smart contracts and token creation technology. Prior to Polymath, he was a Silicon Valley entrepreneur, blockchain speaker and cryptocurrency investor. Koverko founded eProf.com, an online education platform, and Digital Assets International, a world leading tech private equity firm. In 2015, his Oculus Rift-based project became the world’s first VR exit.

Koverko graduated academic All-Canadian from Canada’s top business school, Ivey, and was formerly a National Hockey League player, drafted by the New York Rangers in 2005. He has since invested in dozens of blockchain companies and was an original advisor/investor to the $30 billion Ethereum project.
